ROYAL NAVAL DOCKYARD

Experience the best of Bermuda at the Royal Naval Dockyard

Shop at the unique boutiques in the Clocktower Mall and then wine and dine at our range of pubs and restaurants. With glass blowing, crafts markets, beach activities, water sports, museums, pottery and more, Dockyard offers experiences you'll cherish for years to come.

oyal Naval Dockyard has served as a hub in Bermuda for more than 200 years, though the type of activity you'll find here today has decidedly changed since its inception in 1809. The 200 acres that were purchased in the early 1800s by the British Royal Navy were massively transformed over the better part of a century via large land reclamations. Dockyard itself was constructed under the direction of the Royal Engineers. The final complex took more than 50 years to complete and was painstakingly built by hand by enslaved and free Bermudians and by convicts brought to Bermuda from the United Kingdom. The result of their efforts was a strategically located secure anchorage for the Navy, complete with dockyard, victualling yard and ordnance depot. The site heavily influenced life in Bermuda on many fronts; not only did the Dockyard employ on average more than 1,000 Bermudians at one time in the 19th century — accounting for more than 15 percent of Bermuda's income — but it also gave generations of Bermudians training in plumbing, carpentry and other trades.

Today, West End Development Corporation (WEDCO), which has guided Dockyard's development since 1982, continually evolves the area's offerings to ensure Dockyard remains a fresh and captivating destination. These efforts are bolstered by WEDCO's recognition of the site's important historical distinction, resulting in a truly unique hub where past meets present.

Emancipation Day celebration, August 1, 1834, The Hall of History

BY KATIE BENNETT,
NATIONAL MUSEUM OF BERMUDA

THE HALL OF HISTORY: BERMUDA'S STORY IN ART

Described by Lonely Planet as Bermuda's own "Where's Waldo?," The Hall of History by Bermudian artist Graham Foster is a mesmerising floor-to-ceiling grand mural that coils around the columned grandeur of the Pillared Hall in Commissioner's House at the National Museum of Bermuda (NMB).

Painted in Foster's distinct style, the 1,000-square-foot mural traces the 500-year human history of Bermuda and tells the island's multifaceted story with vibrant detail, irreverent humour and poignant observations, capturing the imagination of all ages.

From scenes of children line fishing off a dock, to a Gombey troupe celebrating Emancipation Day, to kite flying and beloved holidays like Cup Match, this stunning piece of history in art illustrates all of the elements that give Bermuda and its people their unique character, highlighting major historical events, obscure day-to-day happenings, as well as local customs and traditions.

Though much has been written about Bermuda history, there are few visuals; and The Hall of History serves as a unique entry point from which to uncover new stories and histories that have never been recorded in art. Museum staff provided Foster with a list of historical events and subjects from the 16th century to present, but he immersed himself in additional research, bringing intense detail to the history and nature depicted in the mural.

The Hall of History would become a three-year labour of love in research, planning and execution. Once the research was complete, Foster had to overcome technical issues with scale and perspective. Employing his unique perspective, Foster used trees, waterways and roads as visual arteries connecting the panels and creating a smooth transition between time periods. Completed in 2009, The Hall of History reflects the immense dedication and hard work that Foster put into the project: He spent more than 7,000 hours working on it and used over 150 12-ounce tubes of blue paint alone in creating it! When asked about his process, Foster quipped: "I will leave a piece of my sanity in this room."

Driven by his passion for Bermuda history, Foster continued his research after the mural was complete and discovered the history of beekeeping in Bermuda. Fascinated by this story, he revisited the work to paint tiny bees into his now technically completed masterpiece. Today, the mural serves as a unique representation of Bermuda's history and cultural heritage and is meant to inspire the viewer to learn something new, take a trip down memory lane, have a good laugh or just lose oneself in the intricate details.

New details or old, you'll be sure to learn something new every time you visit the National Museum of Bermuda and perhaps see history in a new perspective or format. From the wreck of the Sea Venture to the descent of the bathysphere, from the fevered activities of the 18th-century maritime economy to emancipation and the development of modern-day Bermuda, there is so much to discover! Don't miss out on this must-see attraction; visit the National Museum of Bermuda and explore Bermuda's history in The Hall of History.

The National Museum of Bermuda is housed in Bermuda's largest fort, the Keep. NMB's expansive 16-acre property includes eight historic military buildings, including the award-winning restored Commissioner's House. Exhibit topics include Bermuda's links with the West Indies and the Azores, trans-Atlantic slavery, the history of tourism and the island's defence through two World Wars, shipwreck artefacts and local watercraft. Kids will love the Museum Playground & Playhouse, complete with interactive exhibits, a slide and a giant moray eel.

Living History

Today, vestiges of Dockyard's history still exist, and Royal Naval Dockyard remains a major player in many facets of Bermudian life. Naval ships no longer come to call at Dockyard, which instead welcomes cruise ships at its King and Heritage Wharves. The hustle and bustle of tourism and the attractions that have developed to accommodate the island's guests exist alongside historic structures that today house modern offerings. The Keep, the largest fort in Bermuda, dominates the Dockyard skyline and is home to the National Museum of Bermuda, where visitors can find out about Bermuda's history and culture and learn about Bermuda's links with the West Indies and the Azores, trans-Atlantic slavery and the island's defence through two World Wars. Local artist Graham Foster's grand mural, shipwreck artefacts, local watercraft, the Museum Playground & Playhouse and the jaw-dropping views are just a few of many reasons to visit the National Museum of Bermuda.

Dolphin Quest, housed in the National Museum of Bermuda's grounds, boasts an expansive lagoon featuring friendly frolicking dolphins. Dolphin Quest gives visitors the chance to personally interact with these playful mammals in experiences that range from short 30-minute encounters to a full day of working alongside the dolphin's trainers.

The Cooperage, where barrels were historically made, today contains makers of a different sort. The Bermuda Craft Market and Bermuda Arts Centre at Dockyard are both housed here. It's the perfect place to find unique, locally handmade items. Return home with one-of-a-kind mementos of your time in Bermuda whilst supporting local artisans with your purchases — a win-win for all. Here you'll also find the Media Lounge Cinema Wi-Fi & Café, a small, intimate, single-screen cinema showing the latest box office hits. Its air-conditioned lounge offers the perfect place in Dockyard to access emails and stay in touch with friends.

The Dockyard was also a part of more recent history when it hosted the 35th America's Cup in 2017. Whilst the excitement that comes with hosting the elite sailing competition has long passed, the America's Cup lives on in Endeavour, a sailing instruction and education programme headquartered at Dockyard that could very well lead to young Bermudians becoming world-class sailors in their own right.

Breakout in Bermuda

Escape rooms have exploded in popularity in recent years, inviting participants to find the clues and solve the puzzles that allow them to escape as the clock ticks down. Give it a go at Dockyard's Locked on the Rock, whose uniquely Bermudian story-driven games featuring the island and its culture earn rave reviews from those who've managed to escape. The Tucker's Cross escape is based on a 50-year-old mystery, whilst the Cupmatch Hangover scenario begins as the island's biggest holiday ends. Locked on the Rock's newest game, Casemates Escape, is a history-themed challenge that finds you and your friends accused of espionage and locked in the recently converted prison at the former Casemates barracks.

There's another fun interactive experience at Dockyard that has its ups and downs — literally. Channel your inner child with a hop, jump and a bounce at FryDay's Trampoline Park, the only venue of its kind in Bermuda, at the historic Sail Loft Building right behind the Clocktower Shopping Mall. Get your heart pumping with exercise jump classes, try to top high scores at the arcade or go for a strike at the pirate-themed miniature bowling alley. FryDay's offers the kind of charming fun that makes for the best family memories.

THE CERAMICS SPECIALIST

BY ANDREA MILAM

For close to three decades, ceramicist Jon Faulkner has called Royal Naval Dockyard home. You'll find him here most days, hard at work in his studio, practising the craft that's captured his attention since the age of 15.

"For me it's very important to have everything handmade on-site at the highest possible quality we can achieve," says Faulkner.

To that end, all glazes used at the studio are handmade from raw materials, and even the kiln used to fire his works was built by the artist himself. The kiln burns using recycled waste vegetable oil he collects from Dockyard restaurants. The ceramicist's take on the Bermuda souvenir is elegant and perfectly reminiscent of the island's natural beauty. Bermuda Rockpools, inspired by the island's coastline and waters, feature a gritty exterior that pays homage to the surrounding coral reefs and glazed interiors that evoke the sea's ethereal blues. Faulkner's Rockpools are more than just a souvenir — they're a beautiful showpiece for the home, sure to attract the interest of your guests whilst reminding you of your time on the island.

Faulkner's works are prolific in Bermuda. As you travel the island, take a look at the whimsical house signs displaying the quirky names of island homes: These are all by Faulkner and are a coveted housewarming gift amongst homeowners on the island.

Though much of Faulkner's works are inspired by Bermuda, the artist has also long been intrigued by the Japanese style of pottery. He frequently attends workshops, many of which focus on the simplistic Asian style, to continue to hone his craft. His Japanese-inspired works stand proud on his studio's shelves, beautiful pieces of art that would accent anyone's home.

If the idea of buying a souvenir or piece of art that's breakable has you feeling anxious, you can rest assured that during Faulkner's nearly 30-year career, he and his staff have perfected the art of carefully packing and shipping the studio's items. Jon Faulkner Gallery ships around the world via DHL, which will likely have your purchase arriving at your home about two days after it ships.

With an open studio allowing visitors to glimpse the artists at work and pieces that speak to the beauty of Bermuda and beyond, a stop at the Jon Faulkner Gallery is well worth the visit.

A BERMUDIAN TREASURE

BY BURTON JONES, THE LITTLEST DRAWBRIDGE GIFT SHOP

► DID YOU KNOW? You can purchase Bermuda cedar crafts made from old dead cedar trees cut down as a necessity for land development.

For decades, Bermuda was as renowned for its endemic cedar trees as Hershey, Pennsylvania, is renowned for its chocolate. At least that's the way it was until a blight (a wide infestation of scale-born disease) decimated about 90 percent of them during the 1950s.

Until that point, Bermuda cedar was used for everything from cradles to coffins, with houses and ship building in between. Many were even exported to England for ship building. Local craftsmen built their trade on the most beautiful cedar furniture pieces and other treasured heirlooms. It is characterised by its deep reddish-brown colour, density and unique aroma, which is a dead giveaway.

Despite the devastating effects of the blight, Bermuda's government instituted a reforestation programme several decades ago; and Bermuda cedar is beginning to re-emerge as a fixture along the Bermudian landscape. In fact, living cedar trees are still under government protection.

These days, you can purchase Bermuda cedar crafts made from old dead cedar trees cut down as a necessity for land development. In addition, cedar speciality shops carry various beautifully finished cedar pieces that you will treasure forever.
